

« Burnet Interiors lands the PART 145 European Agreement »

Geneva, 24th of May 2007. For more than 40 years, Burnet Interiors have been accomplishing the interior designs of the most beautiful and prestigious business aircrafts, helicopters and high range vehicles. Today, the brand embodies the European reference in terms of quality and prestige concerning the interior design of aircrafts.

The "Swiss Made" know-how of the company settled in Geneva, at the core of the business aviation, has just been officially recognized by the highest European services and awarded the PART 145 which is the reference for maintenance of aircrafts.

Created in 1966 in Paris by Jacques Burnet, prestigious woodworker, Burnet Interiors gradually established themselves on the market of luxury interiors for civil and business aircrafts, thanks to its strategic implantation at The Geneva International Airport, in 1988.

Over the years, Burnet Interiors have been working with the master craftsmen of leather, upholstery, wood and composite materials so as to guarantee a work of quality and precision to its clients and collaborators. Teamed with the most prestigious equipment manufacturers, the company insures interior designs in collaboration with interior architecture and drawing offices, according to every detail of the E.A.S.A international regulation.

« Being available to optimize its clients' investments »

Burnet Interiors' added value rests within the company's capacity of optimizing its clients' investments in the maintenance of their aircrafts. Burnet's advisors reduce the costs by developing a real strategy for maintenance operations in the least possible time.

Availability, reactivity and professionalism are the key elements of the company's success, enabling its team to be so operational. The frame of mind of the people and the importance of every details lead them to provide a service of quality in order to satisfy the highest demands for 5/6 seats cabins up to 25 seats like the BAC 1-11 Burnet Interiors refurbished lately in Geneva with Jet Line Technics, Bucharest.

In 2006, the size of the workshop has doubled going from 600 to 1 200 m², a required and compulsory extension in order to meet the fast growing demand of business and civil aviation markets. More than 40 000 hours have been devoted to all kinds of aircrafts interior interventions, from minor maintenance operations to the integration of audiovisual equipments in the furniture and entire refurbishments that led to complete changes in cabin configurations.

« An Acknowledgement: the PART 145 Agreement »

Burnet Interiors' lasting search of quality is visible through the harmony of colours and the nobility of the materials used: exotic and rare wood, leather, carbon fibre panels and gilt made of fine gold are the testimony of Burnet Interiors' quality, in order to meet and respect the desires of its clients. This Swiss Made Know how recognized in Europe by the principal maintenance centres has just gained the PART 145 European Agreement n° CH.145.0335, delivered by the Federal Office of Civil Aviation.

This agreement constitutes a true recognition for this European Leader in the Interior Design of Aircrafts and Helicopters, led today by Franck Burnet.
